WASHINGTON, Feb. 7 — (UP) —

House and senate conferees on the administration's farm bill will present a revised crop control measure to congress today after more than a month of conference debate.

Final consideration of the bill threatened to precipitate another controversy in both houses. A bloc of Western congressmen, headed by Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, D. Wyo., opposed it, contending that the measure would bring new competition to cattle grazing states.

Sponsors of the farm bill however, predicted early approval of the report made by Chairman Elison D. Smith, D. S. C. and Marvin Jones, D. Tex., of the senate and house agricultural committees.

The conferees, O'Mahoney said, lessened the effectiveness of the "ever-normal" granary provisions of the bill in an effort to obtain price stabilization through controlled production of wheat, corn, cotton, rice and tobacco.

Secretary's Power Cut

The ever-normal granary provision of the original farm bill was modified by elimination of a discretionary power given the secretary of agriculture to order stored 20 percent of any commodity produced under the program. The revised bill provides that the ever-normal granary stocks be comprised only of commodities stored under wheat insurance and crop loan provisions of the bill.

THREE CONVICTS FAIL IN ARIZONA BREAK ATTEMPT

FLORENCE, Ariz., Feb. 7 — (UP) — Three convicts tried to escape from the state prison here today but two fell off the walls within the yard and the third was shot as he started to flee across the desert.

Warden A. J. Barnes said Earl Williams, 36, was shot twice in the knee after he scaled the 20-foot wall of the penitentiary. He stumbled on about 100 yards and tried to hide.

A collier dog, owned by Yard Captain P. B. Lopus, ran from a nearby house and held Williams until he was taken by guards.

U. S. Ships in Asia?

UNITED STATES cruisers sent to Singapore for the February opening of Britain's gigantic new naval base may remain for some time in Asiatic waters, Washington observers predict. Singapore and the new French naval station at Point Saint-Jacques in French Indo-China are seen as possible bases for the U. S. squadron. The movement is said to be in line with President Roosevelt's strategy of closer co-operation with Great Britain during the crisis caused by the Sino-Japanese war.

GUARD CUTTERS HUNT PILOT OF WRECKED PLANE

WEST POINT, N. Y., Feb. 7 — (UP) — Coast guardsmen, police and volunteer workers sought today to solve the mystery of an airplane that plunged through fog into the ice-clogged Hudson river.

The coast guard cutter Manhattan located the wreckage Sunday in about 50 feet of water off the northeast corner of the United States Military Academy reservation. Authorities said the plane could not be raised without the help of divers.

Some persons who saw the plane reported that it was a single-motored cabin monoplane; others said it was twin-motored and large enough to be a transport. It was believed that a pilot was the only one aboard.

A single-motored monoplane, piloted by John (Bud) Fraser, manager of the Matamoros airport at Port Jervis, N. Y., was missing last night on a flight from Detroit that started Saturday afternoon. It was believed that the submerged plane was Fraser's.

Cutters Work With Irons

The Manhattan and the cutter Comanche worked with grappling irons and floodlights last night, attempting to raise the wreckage. Splices of oil and bits of wood were found floating on the surface.

The plane, flying very low, was seen circling around Bear Mountain and West Point. Its landing lights were on and its wing lights were blinking as a distress signal.

Military academy authorities believed that the pilot was attempting to land on the West Point parade ground. He flew so low, they said, that he barely missed the tops of dormitories and other buildings on the reservation.

Fraser had been in Detroit for two weeks while his plane was being overhauled at the Stinson Wayne airport. He left there at 3:17 p. m. Saturday for Port Jervis, and should have arrived early Saturday night.

HOGUE DAM COLLAPSES

Residents Are Warned To Seek Higher Ground

DETROIT, Feb. 7 — (UP) —

More than 500 families were driven from their homes today as week-end floods broke ice jams in rivers throughout Southern Michigan and sent torrents raging over lowlands.

A temperature jump to 58 degrees Sunday brought thunderstorms, rain and hail on the heels of two near-record cold waves.

Washed-out bridges, flooded lowlands and homeless families were reported from Holland on the West, North to the Thumb district and South to Detroit.

A huge ice jam blocked the mouth of the Clinton river near Mt. Clemens. Sheriff's deputies fought to evacuate still more families after a night in which hundreds were threatened.

"We're trying to dynamite the ice," said a deputy, "but haven't been able so far. The water is still rising."

Livestock Lost

He said the only serious damage so far was confined to livestock. Boats were being used to take refugees from their homes. More than 75 families already have been evacuated.

Virtually all Western Michigan streams were over their banks. Rising waters forced a score or more families to flee their homes along the Grand river near Comstock park North of Grand Rapids, according to Sheriff Hugh Blacklock. The sheriff said he had warned as many more to seek safety on higher ground.

A dam on the Hogue river at Childsford south of Rockford collapsed last night under the crumbling force of an ice jam. Sheriff's deputies prepared to dynamite the jam. Flood waters of the Rouge and Grand rivers were reported rising still higher. Several bridges crossing both streams were closed by state police Sunday afternoon.

She was married in 1865 at Otumwa, Ia., to Cleon Hendershott, who preceded her in death. Mrs. Hendershott was a member of the Christian Science Church of Boston, Mass.

V. E. MCCOY RESIDENCE LOOTED SECOND TIME

The Rev. V. E. McCoy, 1226 S. Pickaway street, reported to police that his home was entered Saturday night and between $3 and $4 taken.

Entrance is believed to have been made with a skeleton key. Officers said it was the second time the home had been burglarized.

Countian Injured During Fisticuffs in City Jail

Finley Barker, 61, of Mt. Sterling Route 2, was bound to the grand jury under $500 bond, Monday by Mayor W. B. Cady after he denied a charge of assaulting Leonard Gilmore, 52, of near Williamsport, while the two were lodged in the city jail Saturday night. Barker was unable to provide bond and was sent to the county jail. He paid a fine of $15 and costs on a drunk and disorderly charge assessed by the mayor.

Officers said Barker struck Gilmore, fracturing his nose. He gave him a severe beating and kicking too, police say. Gilmore was treated by Dr. E. L. Montgomery. The assault charge was filed by William F. McCrady, police chief. Gilmore was released under a $5 bond on an intoxication charge and forfeited his bond, Mayor Cady said.

Three others arrested for intoxication posted bonds. Two gave $5 bonds, one a $10 bond.

Fines of $25 and costs each were imposed on two Dayton men arrested Saturday by a highway patrolman. They were given hearings before the mayor. Those assessed were Melvin Woodgeard, 17, charged with operating a motor vehicle with dealer's tags, and Paul Gulasa, 22, driving without a driver's license. They paid their accounts Sunday.

Twelve persons posted $2 each in police court for overtime parking. Those who paid were Ray Pence, Route 3; Mrs. Weldon Babb, New Holland; Helen Warner, Stoutsville; Alonzo Buzzard, N. Pickaway street; Perry Hartman, Stoutsville; Ben Allen, Route 2; Frank Wharton, Ashville; Robert Pickens and Wilbur Maiden, Circleville; Charles Reid, Thomas Hoffman and H. L. Famous Tire Manufacturer
Found Dead At Home
In Miami Beach

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 7 — (UP) — Harvey S. Firestone, 70, millionaire tire manufacturer whose enterprises helped to blaze the paths of American industrial expansion during the last half century, died at his Winter home today.

Firestone, apparently in good health until last night, was found dead in his bed at his ocean-front estate, "Harbel Villa."

His death leaves but one survivor of the great scientific and industrial triumvirate that made economic history in America during the 20th century. Henry Ford, a close friend of Firestone and a member of that group, alone survives. Thomas A. Edison, the third member, preceded Firestone in death.

Firestone was one of the last survivors of the industrial giants who built vast industries in an expanding America, and maintained individual control of them after they developed into multi-million dollar concerns.

During his lifetime, Firestone saw a small enterprise—the Firestone Tire and Rubber company—grow from a business employing 17 men into a world-wide company, employing more than 20,000 workers and extending into most of the major countries of the world.

SUSPECT PUT IN JAIL

Aged Georgia Minister
Shot To Death

FINDLAY, Feb. 7 — (UP) — Rev.

William S. Noble, 33, pastor of the Church of Christ at North Baltimore, O., was in a hospital here today with injuries which he said were inflicted by a man who assaulted him on a North Baltimore street Sunday night.

Marshal John Neil of North Baltimore held a 28-year-old meat market employee on a charge of suspicion of the assault.

Rev. Noble, semi-conscious, stumbled into the Iri Wirick home and said: "He kicked me in the back and then let me have it."

Neil said the minister mentioned the suspect's name. No motive for the assault could be learned.

Rev. Noble's glasses were broken and his head injured. His condition was reported as good today. He is a semi-invalid as the result of an automobile accident recently.

Slayer of Aged Preacher Hunted

FREDERICK, St. Simons Island, Ga., Feb. 7 — (UP) — Police feared today they might never know who killed 75-year-old Charles H. Lee, a benign, white-haired preacher, who was shot through the temple while working in the peace of his parsonage, on his Sunday sermon.

The Rev. Mr. Lee was a member of the Lees of Virginia and, therefore, a kinsman of Robert E. Lee. He was pastor of historic Christ church here whose first pastor was John Wesley, founder of Methodism.

No Enemies Known

So far as police could determine, the old man had not an enemy in the world. He was killed by a .38 caliber pistol fired through a window of his study. Two bullets broke the glass in one pane of the multi-paned window, a half hour apart. The first embedded itself in the wall. The second killed him.

In the absence of any likely motivation, police considered the possibility that an island fisherman, celebrating, had been firing a pistol at random from the street outside and that two of the bullets happened to go through the window, one to kill. Both the Rev. (Continued on Page Eight)

Bunn Action for $25,400 Opens in Court Tuesday

Transfer of suits against the county commissioners, scheduled to open Tuesday in Common Pleas court before a jury of Fayette

This case has been replaced with the $25,400 damage suit of Joseph L. Eisenberg, as administrator of the estate of Walter R. Bunn, based on the same wreck. Walter Bunn died of injuries.

A request for 25 prospective jurors was sent to Fayette county. Another request for 10 more was sent after it was learned that 10 on the original list were ill.

FUMES BLAMED FOR DEATHS OF FIVE IN FAMILY

NORFOLK, Va., Feb. 7 — (UP) — Investigators today blamed a defective heater, lacking a vent to discard deadly fumes, for the carbon monoxide deaths of five persons at the home of David O'Neal.

The dead were O'Neal, 48-year-old former seaman; his wife, Goldie, 27; their seven-year-old daughter, Goldie; Lloyd Hayman, young boarder at the home; and Mrs. Effie Mae Jensen, 19, a visitor.

Neighbors who noticed electric lights burning in the house yesterday after failing to see members of the household since Saturday called police. Detective Leon Nowitzky entered and found the bodies scattered through the house.

Indications were the victims had been dead since shortly before midnight, according to Coroner C. J. J. MacDonald. Positions of the bodies indicated the deadly, odorless gas took one life at a time, in quick succession, and that some of the group collapsed as they tried to help the others.

The court of appeals decision held that Mrs. Hahn had been sufficiently informed of the indictment and the bill of particulars as to the nature of the crime with which she was charged.

HOOD CAR AND BAKERY TRUCK IN COLLISION

Auto driven by Mrs. Cora Rader Hood, Pickaway township, and a bakery truck driven by Gerald L. Michael, 1396 Indianola avenue, Columbus, were involved in a collision Saturday on E. Main street at the alley near the Farm Bureau. No one was hurt.

Owen Downey, of 442 E. Water street, Chillicothe, reported to police that a window in his car was broken while he was driving on the Lancaster pike near Lover's Lane. The damage was caused by a sling shot, police said.

No accidents were reported to the sheriff's department.

Rumors Contend That No
Cuts To Be Made

NEW YORK, Feb. 7 — (UP) —

Leaders of the Steel Workers Organizing committee and officials of the United States Steel corporation sat down together in a hotel room today to try to work out a renewal of their collective bargaining agreement which expires on Feb. 28.

Union leaders, headed by Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing committee, and a right-hand man of C. I. O. Chairman John L. Lewis, entered the conference after a preliminary meeting in which they selected a sub-committee to conduct the negotiations.

Neither Murray nor representatives of "big steel" would comment on reports that an agreement already had been reached in secret conferences in Pittsburgh and that today's session was called merely for the purposes of ratification.

Wages Report Passed
Neither would Thomas Moses, vice president of United States Steel, deny or affirm reports that U. S. Steel had agreed not to reduce wages beyond the rates fixed in the expiring contract.

It was reported in union quarters that one of the proposals carried into the joint meeting of unionists and steel men was to extend bargaining rights to the union for all employees instead of for only its own members as is provided in the existing contract.

The union in turn would agree not to ask for a wage increase, the same source said.

The existing contract between the S. W. O. C. and the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation, a U. S. Steel subsidiary, provides for wages of 65½ cents an hour for common laborers and recognizes the union as bargaining agency only for its own members.

MARIE'S APPEAL TURNED DOWN BY DISTRICT COURT

CINCINNATI, Feb. 7 — (UP) —

The decision of the lower court in refusing to set aside a death verdict and grant a new trial for Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn, convicted Cincinnati poison slayer, was upheld today by the Hamilton county court of appeals.

Mrs. Hahn is under sentence to die in the electric chair at Ohio penitentiary on March 10 for the murder of Jacob Wagner, 78. Her attorneys, Joseph Hoodin and Hiram Bolsinger, have indicated they will appeal the case to the Ohio supreme court which would mean a delay in the execution date.

The court of appeals decision held that Mrs. Hahn had been sufficiently informed of the indictment and the bill of particulars as to the nature of the crime with which she was charged.

Ice Breakers Discover Young Student

BOSTON, Feb. 7 — (UP) — An autopsy will be performed today to determine the cause of death of Frederick William Burgess, 22, of Cincinnati, O., first-year law student at Harvard law school, whose body was recovered from Charles river basin yesterday.

Medical Examiner William J. Brickley said his finding probably would not be announced "for several days."

A note on the West Boston bridge beside Burgess' overcoat and hat last Nov. 14 pointed to suicide, police said. Scrawled on the back of a bank deposit slip was: "I am sorry."

Findings of Burgess' body ended a three month nationwide search by federal agents. Two ice-breakers, William D. Foley and Charles J. Gilbert, saw the body floating 40 feet from the Charles river basin locks.

Identification was made by Dr. Frederick A. Keyes, chairman of the state dental examiners, who announced that the teeth checked with charts furnished by young Burgess' dentist, Dr. George E. Bratten of Cincinnati.

Burgess, son of President Fred A. Burgess of the Vacuum Oil company of Ohio, last was seen at his Harvard dormitory the night of Nov. 13.

Another Feud in Kentucky

ANOTHER feud is on in Kentucky. This is a political one involving Democratic Senator Alben Barkley, senate majority leader; Democratic Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler, and Democratic Senator Marvel Logan. Chandler is eager to run against Barkley, up for re-election. Barkley is favored by the administration. Another obstacle in the way of Chandler's senatorial ambitions is that Senator Logan's term does not expire until 1943. It is said the Chandler organization in Kentucky worked out a solution to the dilemma. But, say observers, premature publicity killed it. The plan called for appointment of Senator Logan to an existing vacancy on the federal bench in Kentucky. Then Governor Chandler could be appointed to his vacated senate seat. However, Senator Logan declared he would not accept an appointment to the bench tendered under such circumstances. Following a call at the White House, Governor Chandler was undecided whether or not to run against Senator Barkley.

Deaths Follow Refusal To Allow Wife to Dance

FORD CITY, Calif., Feb. 7—(UP)—Alfred Lang, who worked nights and permitted his wife to go dancing with another man, was left today with two motherless children and a tragedy at his little home in the oil field. Because when he revoked his wife's privilege of going out, especially on nights when he was home, her dancing partner came and killed her, and himself.

The slayer-suicide was Fred Freeman, 35. Lang and his wife both were 30.

Freeman had taken Mrs. Betty Lang to dances frequently, with her husband's permission until, last New Year's eve, Lang said it must stop. He forbade Freeman to see Mrs. Lang again.

But Saturday night Freeman came again. There was another dance and he wanted Mrs. Lang to go. Lang was at home. He forbade his wife to go out and she obeyed him. Freeman left the house, armed himself with a pistol and a section of gas pipe and apparently he lay in wait all night in Lang's automobile which was parked near the house.

Wife Shot Twice

Sunday morning Lang started to work at his day-shift job in the oil field. He started to enter his car and Freeman pounced on him. He felled Lang with a blow on the head and then ran into the house.

Coast Cutter Seeking To Remove Whale from Bay

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 7.—(UP)—Coast guardsmen put out today with a one-pound gun, rifles and sidearms, to battle a 60-foot, gray-back whale, of the so-called man-killer variety from the North Pacific, which has trapped itself in San Francisco bay to terrorize the shipping lanes.

The latest and narrowest escape in several days of dodging the whale was reported by Capt. Frank Olivera of the tug Gerald C, which chugged into the safety of the Redwood City harbor at full steam after all but brushings of the monster.

"I was looking off to win'ard casual-like and all at once there was a swell not 35 feet off our side," Olivera said. "Then up she came like the bottom of the bay. One of the men yelled 'thar she blows!' She blew, all right, spouted like a geyser near enough to spray us."

The coast guardsmen took out one of the speediest cutters. Their orders were "shoot to kill." The men who sit and watch the ships go out were of a mind that the one-pounder would do the job, though some of them sniffed at the sight of rifles and sidearms.

Named Man Killer

"We used to call them devil fish," said Capt. Louis Lane, who has done a bit of whaling off Alaska in his time. "They're man killers all right. This one's galled (mad) and is something to stay away from. They're bad enough any time, but when they get trapped, watch out! Why, she's likely to swamp a ferry in a rush. They'll ram a ship sometimes, and a hundred tons of fish rushing through the water can stave in a mighty big hole."

Capt. Lane took a particular interest in the whale because he was first to sight it. He is pilot aboard a Norwegian vessel now, and hasn't felt a harpoon in his hands in many years, but even if he had, there wasn't a whaling boat in the harbor and no market for a whale.

The marine department of the Chamber of Commerce declared the whale a serious menace and the coast guard went to work. Lookouts on all cutters kept watch with binoculars during regular patrols, and the one cutter was assigned to the battle.

Lookouts also were stationed on ferry boats, and the men on tugs and fishing boats kept a whaler's eye to the sea close by.

The whale came in past the Golden Gate last week, probably chasing herring, and was unable to find its way back to the gate, which is the bay's only outlet to the sea.

Capt. Lane said the whale was "very old and covered with barnacles." He said that history of Alaskan whaling was full of accounts of gray-backs attacking ships, that they had wrecked any number of ships and killed scores of men.

Eight years ago another whale got itself trapped in the bay and died on the shoals when it ventured too near the shore and was left there by the outgoing tide. The present whale has been seen perilously near the shore and some of the harbor men thought it might destroy itself before coast guardsmen found it.

WEEK REQUIRED FOR STATE CASE IN SPRINGFIELD

SPRINGFIELD, Feb. 7.—(UP)—The prosecution in the trial of Harry B. Dingleline, his son, Henry, both of Springfield, and Harry Chapman, Chicago, charged with the murder of Patrolman Martin Randolph, continued direct examination of witnesses today with indications that the state will require a week to complete its case.

The murder indictment resulted from the slaying of Randolph and a deputy sheriff in a gun battle at Crystal lake last fall following a holdup. A bandit also was slain. The Dinglelines already have been convicted of murder for the death of Deputy Edward Furry.

NATIVITY OF SALMON

THE Alaska salmon problem is now being aired in Congress, and a rather important problem it is for a considerable American population. Japanese fishermen seem to be poaching heavily on American salmon supplies in defiance of American game laws. Thus thousands of our fishermen, who obey the laws, are handicapped.

The American attitude is that salmon born in American waters, which means in the inland streams of Alaska and our northwestern coast states, are American fish. The Japanese have no right to set their nets offshore, catching them in large quantities and taking them back to Japan, while American fishermen haul up empty nets.

Anthony J. Dimond, Alaskan delegate to Congress, has offered a bill to protect the territory salmon fisheries against "Japanese encroachment." Representative Sirovich of New York, at a committee hearing on the measure, says: "It's time this pussyfooting with the Japanese is done with. I'm in favor of sending our torpedoes, airplanes and bombers up there and getting rid of all of them."

This is loose, rash talk. But something should be done about the matter before it gets worse. Wars have come from causes no greater than fishing grievances.

THE TURN TO EDUCATION

THINGS are looking up a little for education. It has been reported that more of last year's philanthropies were gifts to educational institutions or to funds promoting research and education.

Among the changes observed is the increases in gifts by women to colleges. For years alumnae of the leading women's colleges have been working to arouse public interest in their endowments. It was recognized that these institutions were an essential part of the system of higher education, but they were usually neglected by the big donors among men, while women had not yet taken to giving large sums for such purposes.

The present trend is indicative of the whole national attitude toward education. There is evident on every hand a keener appreciation of the nation's great need to know and to understand the problems of government and economics that trouble our society and to find the right answers by the process of education.

It was rumored that the granddaughter of the Queen of Netherlands was to be called "Emma." That's a fine, solid, respectable name, but "Beatri Wilhelmina Armgard" is certainly more princess-like.

Solomon said: "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom and the man that getteth understanding." But it's not a common experience.

World At A Glance

Rentals, some authorities say, are advancing or are on the point of doing so.

It is an argument in favor of individual home building—the housing program.

Do not pay rent. Build, and save money. That's the theory.

I wish rentals WOULD advance. I would verify my judgment. I do not pay any on my house. I own it. That is to say, I hold title to it. I am footing the bill for it on the installment plan.

As explained by the real estate salesman, the scheme has an appearance of plausibility. The monthly installments are a bit less than monthly rentals rates would be. Besides, the installment buyer is paying an equity in toward ownership of his property, which ultimately will belong to him—if he lives long enough.

He has, however, an initial down-charge to meet, tying up that much of his capital. His installments also bear interest. He is soaked for taxes. And insurance. And upkeep. And fuel and utilities—which most apartments furnish gratis.

The total is considerably higher than if he were a tenant. But if rentals would only bulge sufficiently? Why, then the installment purchaser, whose impost is fixed by contract, would be able to give the laugh to the tenant.

I hope they do, by gravity!

DR. FRANK WRONG?
Dr. Glenn Frank denounces the Roosevelt administration as Fascistic.

This is not very consistent. Fascism notoriously is pro-big business. So is Naziism, for that matter.

It is common talk that Italian big business backed Mussolini and that German big business backed Hitler. In both countries centralized government largely ended unemployment. Both countries largely lost their liberty. Yet Mussolini and Hitler alike created a certain sort of prosperity.

Accordingly, if the New Deal is Fascist, why hasn't it created a similar sort of prosperity here?

Yet Dr. Frank's complaint is that that is just what it hasn't done.

NAVY IN FIGHTING SHAPE

WASHINGTON — One thing Franklin Roosevelt has done for the navy which, although much less spectacular than building battleships, is almost as important, is to shake up the sea-dogs who have been vegetating at its top.

If you are going to spend a billion extra dollars in big guns and armor plate, it becomes of more than passing importance that we have officers competent to steer these toys around. And during the Hoover-Coolidge administrations the minds of the admirals were so knotted in red tape, and their lives so restricted by an undeviating round of cocktailing, desk-warming and golfing that it would have done the country no good to have built more battleships even had Congress been willing to pay for them.

In fast the new cruisers finally built by the admirals during the Hoover administration all rolled so badly that it spoiled the aim of their new eight-inch guns, and suffered from cracked stern posts which had to be mended at an extra cost of $30,000 per.

During the eight years he served as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, however, Franklin Roosevelt really got to know something about naval personnel, and under his inspiration the navy actually has begun to weed out some—not all—of the officers whose high rank depended largely upon the size of their wife's income or their technique on the golf course.

CHIEF WEEDE

The man who has done most of the house-cleaning for the President is Admiral William D. Leahy, whose title is Chief of Naval Operations, but who, with a sick and aged Secretary of the Navy, is today the actual boss of the Navy Department.

The above statement must be qualified immediately on one important point. On general policy Roosevelt himself is very much the actual boss of the navy. However Leahy visits the White House regularly twice a week and the two men pull together perfectly.

Leahy is one of the few officers in either branch of the service who calls the President "Franklin." Other naval officers give the impression of familiarity. Admiral Adolphus Andrews, for instance, will tell you how at lunch "the President said to me, 'Adolphus,' etc." But you can bet your last dollar that most of them don't respond with "Franklin."

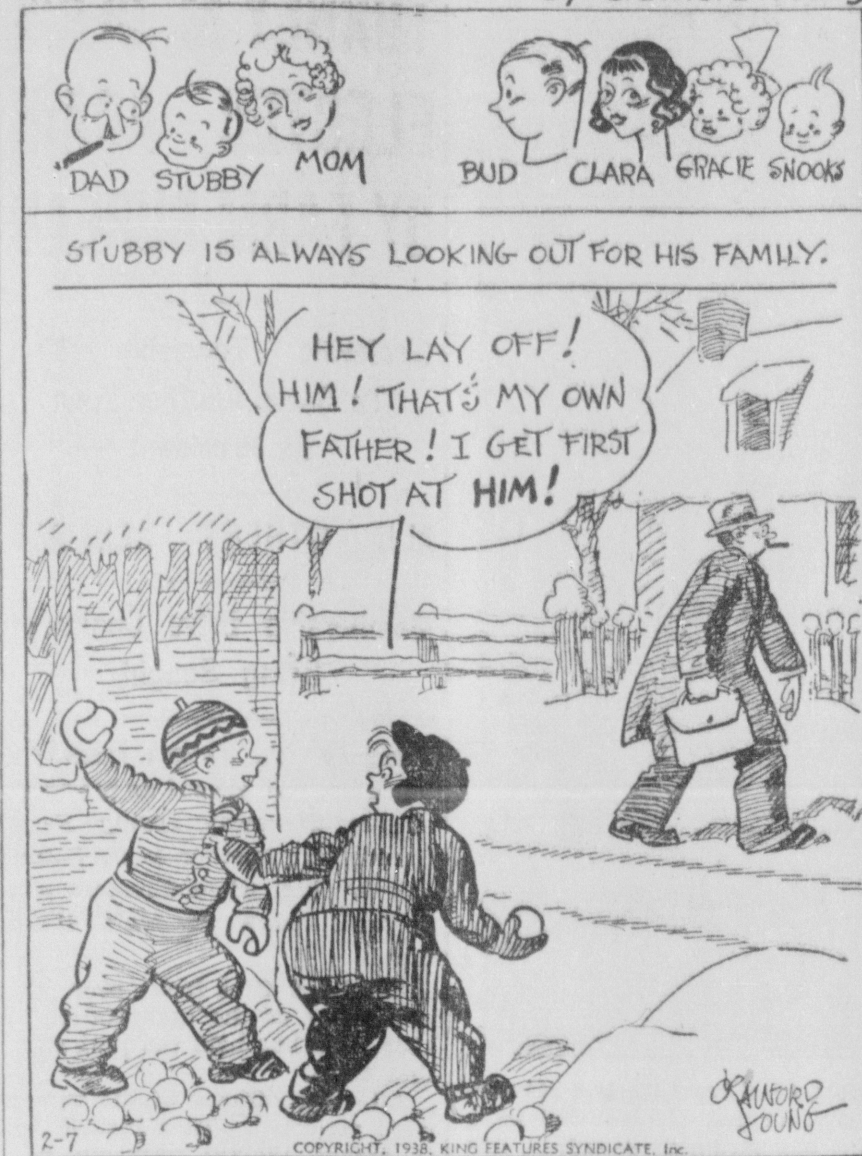

Leahy, however, got to know Roosevelt in 1912 during the first year of the Wilson administration, when, as a commander, he served as Director of Target Practice, later was assigned to the Bureau of Navigation. Assistant Secretary Roosevelt was then an energetic youngster of thirty. Leahy was 37. And to some extent the older man helped initiate his senior executive into the Navy. They have been good friends ever since.

The League of Nations, like some other good causes, suffers as much from its friends as its enemies.

Half the time we Americans all fight with each other, and the other half we all rise or sink together like a flock of blackbirds.

Corner Store Older Than You've Imagined

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
DO YOU SEE that man over there in the white coat, coming to the door of his shop to direct that woman to the street car that goes to the postoffice? He looks spruce and clean and modern, but he has been doing business, there or somewhere in some capacity, for ten thousand years. He is the corner drug store.

He was a fixture in the life of the world long before there was a court of law. Before there was a president or a constitution or a king or a government, even. Because they tell that the most primitive race on earth, who live in a social system that is not even tribal, have a special tree, the leaves of which are used to put on wounds to make them heal. In Exodus is written, "The Lord spake unto Moses: Thou shalt make it in an oil of holy ointment, an ointment composed after the art of the apothecary." And if that wasn't the corner drug store, what was?

The druggist at the corner drug store used to go out and gather his own herbs. In fact, for many years the best drug stores were associated with monasteries, and the monks grew in their gardens the plants which they used for drugs and cosmetics, so the cosmetic counter of a modern drug store is a logical part of that institution.

Employs World Resources
The pharmacist of today does not collect his own samples personally—he has the resources of the world at his disposal through the organization of the large manufacturing drug companies—but he has other responsibilities and is trained better than any of the pharmacists of the old days. It is well that he has this responsibility and training, because you have to depend on him just as much as you do on the doctor, for an honest product. He shares the responsibility with the physician of seeing that you get exactly what the doctor ordered with no substitution; that the ingredients of a prescription are carefully measured and compounded, and that the prescription is a matter of record so that it can be referred to later.

He is a chemist as well as a purveyor, and the "q. s." which the doctor sometimes slips into his prescription allows him to put "quantity sufficient" of sugar or peppermint oil or spice of some kind to make an otherwise disagreeable medicine palatable.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS
A. K.: "Can you give me information on the care of the teeth, especially with regard to mouth odor? My teeth are rather crowded and, therefore, I have some difficulty in cleaning them thoroughly."

The most important thing about keeping a mouth clean under these circumstances is the proper use of a small toothbrush with tough bristles. A powder or sandy toothpaste is probably best. The brush should be laid against the teeth and pushed in with a slight rotary motion, systematically placing it between every tooth, front and back, in the upper and lower jaw. The best deodorant is the use of a weak solution of chloramine. Some tooth powders now include this ingredient.

A CASE FOR 3 DETECTIVES

By LEO BRUCE
COPYRIGHT BY LEO BRUCE, RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Three famous detectives, Lord Simon, M. Picon, and Monsignor Smith, are investigating the murder of Mrs. Mary Thurston, middle-aged wife of a retired English physician, found slain in bed during a week-end party, at the Thurston home near London. Those in the house when Mrs. Thurston retired were her husband, Townsend, the author, Williams, the family lawyer; Strickland, a sportsman, and the servants. Mr. Rider, the vicar, had been a dinner guest. Three piercing screams preceded the discovery of the tragedy. Mrs. Thurston's bedroom door was bolted from the inside and the only open window was high up. She had tossed the murder weapon, a Chinese knife from the Thurston hallway, was 20 feet from the room. Sergeant Beef, the local constable, also in on the scene. Preliminary investigation revealed Mrs. Thurston had a stepson by a first marriage who had a bad name and who had not been heard of for years; also that her husband accounted the girl she may have been a blackmail victim. The detectives are questioning the Thurston cook, Stall, the butler, is the next witness. Stall admits he was aware of some sort of understanding between Mrs. Thurston and the chauffeur.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 21

"YOUR ROOM is next door to that of the chauffeur, I think?" M. Picon still was firing questions at the butler.

"That's right."

"Did you hear him come to bed?"

"No. I had a headache and wanted to sleep."

"Do you sleep with the window open?"

"No. Closed."

Lord Simon groaned. "So unhealthy," he murmured.

But just then I received a shock of surprise. So, from all appearances, did Stall. For M. Picon snapped an extraordinary question at him. "Where did the screams come from?" he said, looking straight at the butler.

"Come from? What do you mean?"

"Just precisely what I say. You heard the screams from your room. Where did it seem to you that the scream was made?"

"I . . . I hadn't thought of it. I was half-asleep. I just heard three screams."

"But where? Where?"

"Why, from Mrs. Thurston's room, I suppose."

"You suppose? But of what value to me, Amer Picon, is what you suppose? You are sure that they came from Mrs. Thurston's room?"

Stall seemed bewildered. "Well . . . I hadn't thought of it."

With an impatient foreign sound, M. Picon turned away from him.

"Forgive my chiming in," said Mgr. Smith. "But a man may chime in as a bell may chime out. And did a bell chime out, Stall?"

"When?"

"When the girl was having hysterics?"

"Oh, then. Let me think. Yes. The front door bell. It was the Vicar."

Mgr. Smith was silent, and after a moment Sam Williams signed to the butler to leave.

"Our most illuminating witness to date," commented Lord Simon. "He has certainly thrown some light on the subject," said M. Picon.

"And the bell which did not ring may be its curfew," soliloquized Mgr. Smith.

It was at this point that the "cold buffet" promised to us by the competent Miss Storey was produced. Stall wheeled in two butler's trolleys, and supplied us with food as urbanely as if he had never thought of shouting back his indignant denials a few minutes earlier. His manner was once more impeccable—such a word as blackmail might never have assailed his lobeless ears.

The food, too, was excellent. I remember eating three lobster patties with as much gusto as if poor Mary Thurston herself had been there to press me to another.

And with them I had a drink of which I am extremely fond, though gourmets tell me that it should not be thought of at a time when one is eating—a stiff whiskey in a large tumbler, filled to the brim with soda water.

I could see Lord Simon shuddering at this. "My dear old boy," he could not help saying, "that's death, you know. Absolutely bally death."

"It's never done me any harm," I grinned. I had realized that I was expected to be something of a fool—to catch the last fessie in an investigator's work one had best be 'hat."

"And I suppose you'll smoke a cigar on top of it?" he breathed, as though it hurt him.

"I've every intention of doing so."

"Then Lord help your stomach. What do you think of the case—so far?"

My conclusions, it must be owned, were at this point a trifle confused. And when under Lord Simon's kindly glance I tried to express them, they really did not sound very helpful. I was sure enough on one point—that Stall knew more than he had admitted. Otherwise, why had he lied about the time at which he received the money? On Thursday, he had said, but a few grains of his snuff were still on the dressing table when we examined it. The dressing table had a glass top. In a house as well cleaned as this one, it would have been impossible for it to have escaped Enid's dust-er on Friday morning. But why should Stall have lied? Surely he could not have committed the murder, for he had been outside that locked door almost as soon as we were. But then, so had every one else.

At this point I saw a faint smile stretch the aristocratic lips above Lord Simon's chin.

"Everyone?" said Lord Simon.

"Well, everyone except the Vicar and the new suspect, Miles. On the whole, I think it is probably one of those two, though I don't see how it can have been the Vicar, or where was he when we broke into the room?" And how ever clever a cat-burglar Miles was, how could he have climbed in or out of that window? And if he by any means used one of those ropes to get in at the window above, how had he escaped notice, and got out of the hotel after 10:30? Besides, what motive could he have?"

"Confusion, isn't it?" said Lord Simon.

I plunged on. I wondered about the clock. She was a determined sort of a woman, evidently with strong prejudices. And she had no alibi at the time of the murder. Or Norris. What about Norris? No one had seemed to pay much attention to him. He was on the scene pretty quickly. But then—that might be in his favor. After all, he couldn't have come through the door, and he hadn't had time to come round. Or Strickland? He slept next door. That was suspicious surely. But he had come out of his room within so short a time. And there was no ledge along which he could have climbed. Then there was Felowes. A violent sort of a chap, and as it appeared now, a bit of a Don Juan. An affair with Enid, and something of the sort with Mary Thurston.

"In fact," said Lord Simon, "you suspect everyone?"

"Well, that's what it seems like. Though I don't see how any of them could have done it, really."

"What about that stepson?"

"Oh yes," I returned ingenuously. "I was forgetting that. Well, there again, there are several possibilities. I thought at first it was Strickland. But I'm not so sure now. Why shouldn't it be Norris? Or Felowes? Or Miles?"

"Or even you," said Lord Simon quietly.

"Well, it doesn't happen to be me," I returned, not caring much for the remark, "but I see what you mean, of course."

"At any rate, you find it all pretty puzzling, what?"

"Of course I do. Don't you?"

"I have my moments of lucidity," said Lord Simon, "but there's a lot of information I'm hankering after still. He turned aside. "By the way, Beef?" he called across the room.

The Sergeant's mouth was full of rabbit pie, but he made some answering sound.

"Have you looked up the record of our next witness—Fellowes, the chauffeur?"

The Sergeant swallowed so violently that his throat seemed to distend like a chicken's. "Record?" he said. "What record?"

"The criminal record, of course," said Lord Simon, who seemed to enjoy discomfiting the Sergeant.

"Didn't know 'e 'ad one," said the latter sulkily.

"There! It's a good thing I have Butterfield with me. He was able to discover that Fellowes did a stretch of 18 months in prison four years ago, for burglary. Violent sort of business, I gather."

"Can't know everything," mumbled Sergeant Beef. "And it ain't got nothink to do with the case, anyway," he added.

Lord Simon shrugged. "Beef of the evening, beautiful Beef," he murmured.

I moved across to M. Picon. The little man was munching happily, and quite elated. I could not remember him enjoying a meal before this, and was delighted to see the color rising to his ovine cheeks.

"Whatever else that Mademoiselle Storey may be," he said, "she is an artiste."

I hesitated to explain that with that term in our mixed language he had accused her of activities on the music hall stage, and nodded appreciatively.

"Are you beginning to get the hang of this affair?" I asked.

"Get the hang?" He laughed outright. "That is a good phrase! But it is not Pas du tout," he will 'get the hang. Pas du tout!"

"I mean, do you understand it yet?"

"I will tell you. I see more light. But what is that? A mote. A black spot. All is not unclouded. But allens, mon ami. All in good time. I, Amer Picon, have said so. And, presently, you will say—'Ah, why have I not seen that?'"

"That's good. But tell me, Monsieur Picon, what did you mean by asking Stall where the screams came from? I thought that was such an extraordinary question."

"An idea, no more. Just a little idea. Quite small. Quite little. But, voyns. We shall see. Sometimes even Amer Picon has an idea, no? Very childish, very simple, perhaps. But still an idea."

And that was all I could get out of him. Mgr. Smith, on the other hand, talked quite readily, though I could not call him informative. Finding myself plunged into this role of inquiring and credulous fool, to whom the great investigators would voice their conundrums, I resolved to make the best of it, and see whether he would add to my bewilderment, or elucidate it.

"It's simple enough so far as it has gone, but like all mysteries, it has not gone far enough. Don't you see that that is what is always puzzling—the case half-solved, the character half-formed? The were-wolf was the most terrifying creature in mythology because it was half a man. The centaur was a horror because he was half a beast. The trouble with most modern thought is that it is half-hearted . . ."

"But Monsignor Smith," I interrupted, fearing that he might continue in this strain all the evening, "who do you think it was that actually used that weapon?"

I thought my question was as direct as it could be, and must succeed in securing as flat an answer.

"Oh, that's easy enough," came the calm reply. "But we are trying to discover who killed Mrs. Thurston."

WELL, I'LL TELL YOU.
BY BOB BURNS

It kinda makes you appreciate this old country of ours where we have free speech when you read about some of these dictator countries where they don't dare express an opinion to the law makin' officials. Not long ago a senator drove a big car into my uncle's gas station 'way back on a mountain road and when my uncle just sat there, without movin', the senator got impatient and said, "My good man, don't you know you won't get any place just sitting around like that? 'If you want to be successful, you've got to have 'push.' The reason I got to be senator is because I've got 'push.'"

My uncle says, "Well, brother, it looks like you're gonna have 'ta push agin because I ain't got a drop of gasoline on the place."

NEW CITY MAY ACCEPT MID-ATLANTIC POSITION

ZANESVILLE, Feb. 7 — (UP) — One Mid-Atlantic baseball league franchise remained un-laced today following the annual Winter meeting of club owners.

Jack McAllister, a representative of the Boston Bees, announced at the meeting here yesterday that the National league club was undecided whether it would keep its farm team at Zanesville.

The Bees operated the Zanesville team last season after the Cleveland Indians moved their Mid-Atlantic representative to Springfield.

Four cities seek the Zanesville franchise. They are Huntington and Wheeling, W. Va., Youngstown, O., and Erie, Pa.

If Zanesville does not operate, Huntington was considered the most probable choice for the location of the franchise. The city formerly was in the Mid-Atlantic as a farm of the St. Louis Cardinals.

It was expected officials of the Boston club would reach a decision relative to the Zanesville franchise within the next 10 days.

FRANKFORT FIVE ON SHORT END OF 17-14 GAME

Red and Black Team Gains Advantage After Trailing At End of Half

VILLAGE FORWARD GOOD

Reserves Drop Three-Point Tilt Saturday

Circleville high cagers gained another victory over a worthy opponent Saturday evening when they turned back Frankfort, 17-14, on the small floor in the Ross county village. An early lead held by the Frankfort lads was overcome to gain the victory.

The losers held a 9-6 advantage at the half with Forward Brown getting eight of his team's points. Brown was covered better in the last half, being held to two buckets, but, at that, he accounted for 12 of his team's 14 points. Shuster and McNeil added free throws to the Frankfort total.

Brown is one of the best long shots the Tigers have gone against this year. Everytime his part of the floor was left open it was points for Frankfort.

Frankfort was unable to pierce the tight zone defense set up by the Red and Black, all of the six baskets scored by the team being from beyond the free throw circle.

The Red and Black gained a 4-2 lead at the first quarter, but was behind 9-6 at halftime. The three-quarter reading was 11-10 in favor of the locals.

With less than a minute to play the locals were ahead 15-14, when Kenny Smith broke loose to score a dribble-in bucket, clinching the ball game.

Tiger reserves lost a hard-fought 18-15 game to the Frankfortites.

The Tigers are scheduled to meet Charles Milligan's Washington C. H. team Friday evening on the Athletic club court.

TIGERS TANGLE WITH SPEEDY ROSS QUINTET

Circleville high Tigers today had accepted a challenge from the Bournville, Ross county, high school quintet. The game will be played Tuesday evening on the Circleville Athletic club court.

The Bournville coach witnessed the Tiger-Frankfort game Saturday night, then told Coach Jack Landrum that he thought his boys could take Circleville to the cleaners. Proper negotiations were made between faculty officials of the two schools, so the game is on.

Bournville ranks high in Ross county cage circles. The team defeated Frankfort by nearly the same score as the Tigers recorded Saturday evening.

Don Schwartz of Ohio State university will officiate.

The first preliminary is scheduled at 6:15. Just who will play is not certain. The reserves of the schools will compete at 7:30 with the varsity contest following.

PURDUE QUINTET HAS CHANCE FOR TIE WITH 'CATS

CHICAGO, Feb. 7 — (UP)—Purdue finally has its chance to close in on first place in the Big Ten basketball standings tonight but there'll be little celebrating this time after the expected victory over Illinois.

The once-feared Illini, who topped the Bollermakers, 51 to 43, in their first engagement, were so crippled by ineptness they had little hope of defending themselves successfully against Purdue's whirlwind attack.

Seven players—including Capt. Louie Boudreau and conference scoring leader Lewis (Pick) Dehner—will be out of the Purdue game. Another, Jay Wardley, whose defensive play figured in Illinois' earlier upset, has been out for several weeks with an injured knee.

Three other conference games also were scheduled tonight. Iowa plays at Minnesota, Ohio State meets Chicago here and Wisconsin travels to Indiana. Northwestern, leading the league with five victories and a single defeat, is idle, giving Purdue a chance to slip in its fifth victory for a first place tie.

Results Saturday:

Purdue 38, Indiana 36

Ohio State 51, Iowa 43

Northwestern 28, Bradley Tech 26

Wisconsin 30, Michigan State 27.

BIG MOTOR NECESSARY Firm To Use Equipment In Early Spring

Modern under-water digging equipment, capable of removing gravel to a depth of 55 feet, will be placed in operation at the Sturm & Dillard plant, Island road, in the early spring. Announcement of the plans for the new equipment was made Monday by J. H. Adams, a company official.

The equipment will be carried on a boat, 26 feet wide and 60 feet long. A five-drum electric hoist with cables anchored on the shores will be used to propel the boat to various points in the lake at the gravel plant.

A manganese steel dredge pump will be used to lift the gravel and water from the bottom of the lake. The capacity of the pump is 7,000 gallons a minute or 4,200,000 gallons for a 10-hour day. A 16-inch pipe will be used and no rocks larger than eight inches will pass through the equipment. The equipment will remove between 250 and 300 cubic yards of sand and gravel an hour. A 600-horsepower electric motor, operated by 2,200 volts, will operate the pump. The pump and motor unit carried on the boat weighs 42,000 pounds.

Extending from the end of the boat will be two pontoons for holding the hoisting equipment to operate the digging apparatus. The frame or "ladder" for the line will be equipped with a moving chain. This chain will loosen the gravel and remove stones larger than eight inches from the nozzle of the line. These stones will be carried up to the boat and dropped in the lake out of the way of the digging line.

The dredge line will be piped to shore near the plant where the gravel can be easily handled in the plant.

This new equipment will make it possible to reach high-grade gravel under water that can not be removed with steam shovels.

The Sturm & Dillard plant is one of the most modern gravel plants in the state.

PENNEY FIRM'S EMPLOYEES PLAN BIG SALE EVENT

The boss is away and again the J. C. Penney Co. employees will play at keeping store, but in a most serious manner. They have but a single thought in mind—to show Irv Kinsey that they can put more cash in the till in a given period than he could do. So, those employees have selected the stock for a big sale, have displayed it and priced it. And the prices are at a real bargain level, too, for those employees are particularly intent on volume.

Today they are buzzing about the store, all thinking in superlatives such as super-colossal, stupendous, gigantic, etc., etc., etc. They believe it, too. "Hundreds took advantage of this same sale when we put it on before," they say. "All of those folk, together with their friends will be back this time. If not then Evelyn Brown, Dorothy Avis, Myra Rader, Howard Richardson, Charles Sobers and Roscoe Warren will lose a lot of faith in themselves and values.

The sale gets under way Tuesday. To allow full leeway to his employees Irv Kinsey has left town for "duration." He left with a smile and sincere hope that "they show me up."

TWO COACHES WIN PLACES ON ATHLETIC COMMITTEE

Carroll S. Woodruff, principal of Jackson township high school, and Gomer Jones, of Salt Creek township school, were elected by county coaches, Saturday, as members of the County Athletic committee. The addition of two coaches to the organization was recently approved by superintendents.

Supts. C. D. Bennett, A. Wendell Boyer and Harold Strous were appointed on a committee to study a suggestion that in future years the county oratorical contest be presented in two divisions. This would eliminate such a lengthy program. Mr. Bennett is committee chairman.

The contest will be held April 22 in the Darby township school.

OHIO PREACHER HURT IN ATTACK

Mr. Lee and his wife heard an explosive noise about a half hour before he was killed, but they are hard-of-hearing and thought it was an automobile back-fire. Though the first bullet broke the window, this was not discovered until after the Rev. Lee had been killed.

In the garden of the parsonage, police found footprints but since the garden was well used by the family and friends among the parishioners, this was a none too promising clue.

Police trackers entered the wild swamp lands of St. Simons island, which is one of six islands off the Georgia coast near Brunswick, but apparently found no evidence that the slayer had escaped that way. Since the island is connected with the mainland by a causeway and there is an automobile road, this would be a more likely way for him to have fled.

Educated in Virginia, the Rev. Lee was pastor of a church in Macon, Ga., for many years. Ten years ago he asked to be transferred to the small but tradition-hallowed church here, rather than be retired.

BOY, 7, RESCUED FROM DEATH IN FAIRFIELD POOL

LANCASTER, Feb. 7.—(UP)—Rescued by two hitch-hikers after a plunge through thin ice into a pool here, seven-year-old Tommy Smith was recovering from shock and exposure in a hospital today. Hearing the youngster's cries as the ice gave way with him, Charles Shumaker and Richard Powers, former Lancaster high school athletes who were "thumbing" a ride on the highway, ran to the pool, stripped off their clothing and waded through the mushy ice to pull him out.

BRITAIN'S SHIPS ORDERED TO FIRE AT SUBMARINES

LONDON, Feb. 7.—(UP)—British warships have been ordered to attack any submerged submarine within the British patrol zone in the Mediterranean, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden announced today in the house of commons.

Gen. Francisco Franco, insurgent leader, has informed Britain that he will not tolerate any submerged submarine in the British zone, Eden added.

Shortly before Eden made his announcement it was revealed that war time conditions prevail in the patrol zone, and that the admiralty had decided to ban publication of the movements of any warships in the zone.

TOWNSEND MUST SERVE 30-DAY TERM IN PRISON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—(UP)—The U. S. Court of appeals today upheld the conviction of Dr. Francis E. Townsend, Old Age Pension leader, on charges of contempt of a house committee investigating his activities.

Townsend is under sentence of 30 days in jail and a $100 fine. He was cited for contempt of the house on March 12, 1937, after he stalked angrily out of a committee hearing, investigating old age pensions.

Townsend suddenly interrupted the hearing, asserting he no longer would "tolerate inquisitorial methods" of members of the committee.

The circuit court decision, written by Associate Justice Justin Miller, held that Dr. Townsend's act was deliberate and cited his statement to the committee saying that he would leave the hearing.

OHIOAN CHARGED WITH DEATHS OF TWO YOUNG MEN

PORTSMOUTH, Feb. 7.—(UP)—John Walker, 50, was to be arraigned on a murder charge here today in connection with the death of two men who allegedly attempted to force their way into his home last night.

Mrs. Effie Walker told police Henry Wright, 27, and Walter Stewart, 24, attempted to force their way into the Walker home to see her daughter, Mildred, 23. She said her husband ordered the men to leave and when they refused he shot them.

BULKLEY DRAWS BILL FOR MAJOR NATIONAL ROAD

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—(UP)—Sen. Robert J. Bulkley, D., O., today said that he hoped to have completed by the end of the week a bill embodying his plan for an $8,000,000,000 transcontinental super-highway.

The system, which Bulkley contended would be self-liquidating, would be financed by bonds issued by a new Federal Highway Corporation, which would be reimbursed by tolls from the highway. Bulkley said President Roosevelt told him at a conference last week that he had been thinking of a similar plan for some time.

O'Mahoney Claims Approval Would Add Competition To Grazing States

land diverted from the production of commodities included in the program will be used for livestock grazing in competition with the cattle states if the measure is restricted principally to crop control.

Under the measure, the secretary of agriculture is authorized to determine the quantity of each commodity needed for domestic and export consumption, in addition to supplies that will carry the country over from one marketing year to another. The total amount needed is broken down into acreage allotments, which subsequently are rationed out among farmers throughout the nation on a basis of past production.

Benefits Provided

In return for cooperating in the program, the farmer receives certain benefits from the government. First, he is entitled to soil conservation payments based on the amount of acres that are diverted from production. A total of $50,000,000 has been earmarked from the $440,000,000 that will be available to finance the program to increase the payments of farmers that otherwise would receive benefits of less than $200.

In addition, farmers may obtain loans on their crops if they wish to store them to await higher prices. In the case of wheat, insurance on the yield is available.

If the secretary of agriculture determines that the production is greater than is needed for domestic, export and carry over supplies, he may order marketing quotas imposed to limit the sales of each farmer. The quotas will not become effective unless approved in a referendum by two thirds of the participating farmers.

FIRE CHIEF, ON VACATION, ATTENDS SIX BLAZES IN SINGLE DAY IN FLORIDA

Attending six fires in one day while visiting the Pensacola, Fla., fire department appeared to be the greatest thrill enjoyed by Fire Chief Talmer Wise on his 15-day vacation in the South.

The fire chief, Earl Weaver, Half avenue, and Ralph McCoy, Lancaster pike, returned Sunday night, after traveling 3,015 miles in their special housecar.

"They were all shingle roof fires," the chief said, "started by sparks from heating with wood. As dry as it is down there they certainly gained headway."

The first night the three were in Northern Florida the radiator on their car froze. "They told me they usually had about four frosts but this year they have had 12 so far," Wise said. "The first night we were there it dropped to 28 degrees. That was during the cold snap in Ohio."

"Further South we found children going to school bare-footed and residents wearing straw hats."

sports writers acclaim as the "outstanding athlete of the Millrose games." His name will be inscribed on the Rodman Wanamaker international trophy.

In his preliminary heat Johnson was clocked in 6.2 seconds, equaling the world mark held by such speed merchants as Jesse Owens, Loren Muchison, Jack Elder, Eulace Peacock and others. On his next trip, in the semi-final heat, he lowered that by a tenth, and in the final he broke the tape in six seconds flat.

Forrest (Spec) Towns, Georgia, and Allan Tolmich, Wayne, broke the 0.75 record for covering 60 yards and topping five hurdles. Tolmich was timed in 0.74 in his preliminary heat, but failed to repeat it in the finals when Towns matched that mark to win the event by a yard.

Accuracy of the clocking of the interscholastic mile-relay was questioned in some circles when the schoolboy foursome from De La Salle institute was timed in 3:23.2 breaking all previous Millrose records for the event, including club and collegiate team marks. This was four-tenths of a second better than the Millrose record set by Pennsylvania. John Quigley, Louis Collado, George Tucknott and Eddie Rogers formed the De La Salle team.

The perennial Kansan, Glenn Cunningham, won the Wanamaker mile as expected, beating out his fellow Kansan, Archie San Romani. It was Cunningham's fifth victory in six Millrose mile starts, and gave him the first leg on his third Wanamaker trophy. He already has retired two.

Don Lash, Indiana, holder of the world two mile record, won his specialty but failed to finish in the one mile run.

The big surprise of the meet was "Long" John Woodruff's failure to finish better than seventh in the 880-yard run which was won by Charley Beetham, formerly of Ohio
